

Augmentation of Arms

HERALD

Without the devotion and dedication of its subjects, a kingdom cannot prosper and grow. For this reason does the Crown recognize and encourage its subjects, when appropriate, through Kingdom awards and Orders.

However, on rare occasions, there comes an individual whose worthy acts and excellence command the admiration of Crown and kingdom. Such exemplary gentles are deserving of special tokens of honor, added to their coat of arms as a public sign of the respect in which they are held. This Augmentation of their Arms is the Crown's honor to bestow, with special permission to use the Cross of Caid on their arms as the mark of their achievement.

Now therefore do We, K. and Q., call before Us: N.
